What Human Flow says about home

It's personal and visceral. Human Flow is artist Ai Weiwei's documenting of the journey of the millions of people around the world forced from their homes to escape famine, climate change and war in the greatest human displacement since World War II. Shot over a year in Africa, Asia, Central America, Europe and the Middle East, the film is "a witness to its subjects and their search for safety, shelter and justice."

A temporary relocation to Avondale is not at all like this massive human migration but is a little like this search for refuge. You'll hear stories of disillusionment, dislocation and of the need for tolerance, compassion and trust. But you'll also hear stories of courage, endurance and adaption. I hope you'll leave Homecoming with a better sense of the human spirit and of our call to strengthen it.

Seventh-day Adventist pioneer Ellen White reminds us of that call in a book exploring biblical principles of Christian education. She wrote it for parents and teachers. Her message (simplified and paraphrased): God's given you the gift of thinking and doing, so use it. White makes the statement to encourage us to explore the sciences and the Scriptures, and then to engage—to act.

What prompted White to write? I asked Ellen G White Seventh-day Adventist Research Centre Director Dr John Skrzypaszek, who told me she's encouraging us to "adapt to the changing circumstances" and "develop a clear understanding of what it means to live in the real world." Why? So we can "provide the best service."

White published Education in 1903, only six years after she helped found Avondale. Adventists believe White exercised a prophetic gift, but her think and do advice is practical. Our thinking must lead to doing that serves needs other than our own.

I'm going to ask you this weekend to join a journey through giving with Avondale by donating to Think&Do. It primarily supports our four research centres as they help us seek a better understanding of how to teach and learn, how to live happier and healthier and how to relate to God. This focus on the mental, physical and spiritual will not only strengthen our spirit but also our ability to strengthen the spirit of others, particularly those seeking a sense of home.

Dr Kendra Haloviak Valentine

Dr Kendra Haloviak Valentine is Professor of New Testament Studies in the H M S Richards Divinity School at La Sierra University (Riverside, California, USA). She has pastoral and educational experience in Seventh-day Adventist churches in the United States and in colleges and universities in the United States and Australia. She completed her doctoral studies at the Graduate Theological Union (Berkeley, California, USA) with a dissertation on the hymns of the book of Revelation. Book publications include Signs to Life: Reading and Responding to John's Gospel (Signs Publishing, 2013) and Worlds at War, Nations in Song: Dialogic Imagination and Moral Vision in the Hymns of the book of Revelation (Wipf and Stock, 2015).

Jaime Jorge

Born in Cuba in 1970, Jaime Jorge began violin studies at age five. At age 10, his family immigrated to the United States where Jaime began lessons with eminent violinist Cyrus Forough, a student of the great David Oistrakh.

Jaime's mother wanted Jaime to play professionally but he dreamed of becoming a missionary doctor. Entering college in 1988, Jaime began all the courses to prepare for medical school, earning acceptance into the University of Illinois in 1992. In his second year, Jaime felt God's call to leave for a life of service dedicated to music ministry.

THE STORY OF ADVENTIST MISSION
BOATS IN THE SOUTH SEAS

YOUNG ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR

BROCK GOODHILL

Brock Goodhill discovered Avondale on a trip to the college with his Year 11 classmates from Carmel Adventist College in Western Australia. The experience of living in men's residence Watson Hall on the Lake Macquarie campus beckoned. Brock enrolled in a Bachelor of Arts and would soon specialise in communication. His career trajectory since graduating in 2012 is impressive.

Brock moved to Sydney and, beginning with smaller firms, has worked consistently in public relations. A former colleague invited him to apply for the role of Senior Publicist and Social Media Manager at Opera Australia. One of his favourite experiences? Moving out of his Sydney Opera House office for three weeks to promote a production performed on a purpose-built seaside stage on Coolangatta Beach. He also pitched an idea for a photograph—the lead in Carmen appearing to walk on the waters of Sydney Harbour with the opera house in the background—to the Picture Editor of The Sydney Morning Herald. The photograph appeared on the front page. And he pitched a story idea to Network Ten lifestyle show The Living Room that placed host Amanda Keller in a guest role in an opera production.

Brock speaks highly of the dedication and passion of his former colleagues. “They do so much incredible work behind the scenes.” He gives as an example the wigs worn in the opera. Each is made from human hair and takes more than 40 hours to complete. “Some productions have over 100 wigs.”

Brock is now Senior Account Manager for Tonic PR & Communications, for which he specialises in beverage, hospitality and travel. He manages a team that creates public relations and social media strategies. Brock's clients value his ability to build networks, respond to culture and connect with his community.

Not everything goes Brock's way. Unsuccessfully applying for a job or pitching to a journalist, “it can be disappointing every time. However, when I look back, I can always see a reason why. Something better popped up and I wouldn't be where I am today if it hadn't.” His advice to students: “Embrace whatever comes your way—good or bad. Learn from the experience and see where life takes you.”

Avondale Alumni honours Brock Goodhill for his passion, professionalism and perspective.—Lynnette Lounsbury

ALUMNUS AND ALUMNA OF THE YEAR

ALASTAIR AND JILLIAN MACGILLIVRAY

Alastair and Jillian Macgillivray will be shocked when they realise Avondale Alumni is recognising their life work in the presentation of the Alumnus and Alumna of the Year awards. But what else would we expect? The couple have lived lives of self-effacing service, much of it as volunteers in the Pacific islands, relying on God to open doors, provide food and resources and show the way.

As a teenager, Jillian Hay gave her heart to God and promised Him a life of service. Attending Avondale College in 1969 and a posting to Carmel College provided a setting for her to fall in love with Alastair Macgillivray, a handsome young teacher with a soft Scottish brogue.

If a young Jesus had decided to enrol at Avondale in the 1960s, we may wonder which course He would have chosen? Probably, there would have been only one: building construction. Carpentry is the only recognisable skill He had acquired. He would have probably blended into the background at Avondale, so humble and redolent of wood shavings and sawdust, that it would have been easy to overlook Him. The same may be said of Alastair, who prayed and worked hard to graduate, in 1968, as an applied arts teacher specialising in woodwork.

Jill and Alastair married in 1972 and their hearts drew them to the Pacific islands. Eleven years of service in Samoa and Tonga established Alastair as a definitive craftsman with skill in almost any area of practical work—allied to a perfectionist streak.

A return to Australia did little to quench their missionary desires. A call to Aore Adventist Academy on Santo in Vanuatu followed. While serving at Aore, Alastair and Jill caught a vision that would enable the local community to develop life skills in furniture making, boat building, mechanics and domestic needs. In his own words, Alastair envisaged “a practical ministry which not only shares the message of Jesus, but through imparting a broad range of practical skills, we will bring a level of security and stability to the lives of these wonderful people.”

Talk about commitment. Alastair invested his inheritance from his father to establish the Listair Institute in 2002. It would become an accredited self-supporting institution of practical learning in Vanuatu. Indebted students wanted to name it the Alastair Institute but he demurred, finally accepting Listair.

Jill would expand upon her already considerable knowledge of the workings of sewing machines, sourcing, repairing and distributing thousands of them for the women of Vanuatu. She has lived out her childhood dreams inspired by the mission stories she heard as a girl in Sabbath school. At the same time, she has learned that mission life for a wife and mother can be challenging, taxing, unpredictable, requiring total dependence on God when faced with the impossible. Alastair has never flinched in his desire to model the life of his Saviour by putting other people first. His final triumph has been the completion of a five-tonne catamaran that is now being used in outer island mission service. Those close to him acknowledge he has never thought of using his advanced skills to make a personal fortune. Their sole fundraising strategy has been to trust in God as their chief executive officer.

Well past retirement age, Alastair and Jill now live in the Mildura district to be closer to their six children and 16 grandchildren. Choosing a life of simple trust, with minimal earthly possessions, they have experienced riches in a way that cannot be readily measured, leaving a legacy of skilled Pacific tradesmen, well-constructed churches and Adopt a Clinics that stand strongly against cyclones.

Avondale Alumni honours the life and work of Alastair and Jillian Macgillivray as being living examples of Avondale College of Higher Education's motto, “A Greater Vision of World Needs.” Their lives surely reflect the words of the prophet Micah, who wrote, “He has shown you, O mortal, what is good. And what does the Lord require of you? To act justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with your God” (Micah 6:8, NIV).—Dr John Hammond

Awards and citations recognise commitment to service and dedication to achieving personal goals. The Alumna and the Alumnus of the Year awards are usually presented to members of one of the Homecoming honour years. The Young Alumnus of the Year award is presented to an alumnus aged 35 and under on the sixth anniversary of their graduation. Citations are presented to members of the Homecoming honour years. The names of recipients are recorded in an Alumni Award and Citation Register. Read it at avondale.edu.au/alumni/about/awards.

EARLE ROGERS

Earle Rogers thought his calling might be in ministry but felt “more inclined towards the accounting side of things.” The New Zealander came via Longburn College to Avondale, graduating from the ministerial course in 1948 and the business course a year later. Employment with health food company Sanitarium in Lewisham, Sydney, followed

Rogers became a qualified accountant, tax agent and company secretary over the course of a career shaped mostly by a 25-year tenure at the National Roads and Motorists’ Association (NRMA). He began as office manager for the car repair division before moving into a new role, budget officer for head office. An accounting role in membership then preceded appointment as Director of Finance. While at NRMA, Rogers embarked on a worldwide study tour of other motoring entities, which led to the introduction of computers in the company. Although he retired in 1990, Rogers maintains his NRMA membership, now in its 61st year. “Always helping people, the NRMA, that’s what I liked about it.”

Rogers liked it because he lives it, too. After a lifetime of service, he is, at age 89, caring for wife Gwendoline in the same Strathfield house in which the couple have lived for almost 60 years. The couple married in 1952 and raised two sons, Barry and Bradley. This new challenge is “part of life,” says Rogers. “We’ve got to take things as they come. God still blesses us.” With good health—Rogers has not suffered from a serious illness—and the fellowship of family and friends, “I haven’t wanted for anything.”

The Class of 1948 honours Earle Rogers for sharing through service the good news of the gospel.—Brenton Stacey

ERROL WRIGHT

Having completed the ministerial course, Pr Errol Wright left Avondale believing if God wanted him in the ministry, He would show the way, and He did. Called after three months of literature evangelism in Sydney to the “coveted” appointment as song leader for Seventh-day Adventist evangelist Pr Jim Cherry’s missions, Errol’s foray “proved to be a fantastic introduction.”

He would marry Zena Hawken that same year then serve the church as a minister in Sydney (1962-1965), North and South New Zealand (1966-1976) and northern New South Wales (1976-1982) before accepting a move to the missions. Roles as a departmental director for the church in the Western Pacific and as president of the church in the eastern Solomon Islands (1988-1991) and in Vanuatu (1992-1999) followed. Errol continued to minister into retirement, serving as a volunteer pastor for more than a dozen churches from Norfolk Island to Broome.

Born and raised in Auckland, New Zealand, Errol completed much of his education as a homeschool student. His high school years included stints at Avondale—to “escape a broken home”—and Carmel College in Western Australia. The principal at Carmel encouraged Errol to enrol at Avondale, where he found units in music and experience in canvassing as most influential. Supporting his Pacific island colleagues with literature such as Bibles and sermon material remains an important ideal.

The Class of 1958 honours Pr Errol Wright for following God’s leading into pastoral and mission ministry for the Adventist Church.—Brenton Stacey

GRAHAM BARNETT

Nobody attending Avondale with Graham Barnett could forget the brash and distressingly voluble boy from Kingaroy, Queensland. Few would have believed the same lad, with a rapier wit and happy penchant for “shafting” anyone within range, could become a renowned missionary and administrator who faithfully followed God’s leading.

Graham graduated with a diploma in 1968 and married Jan Durbridge, the mainstay in his life. A primary teaching career formed in New Zealand would be shaped in Papua New Guinea, where Graham’s pioneering work helped him develop as Seventh-day Adventist school principal, mission pilot then mission director of education. He even survived a forced landing at sea. Returning to Australia, Graham assumed principalships at Toowoomba and Rockhampton and at Bickley in Western Australia before an eight-year appointment as the education and Pathfinder director for the church in that state.

The cry of New Guinea still rang in Graham’s ears—with the addition of a bachelor’s and a master’s degree, he became Dean of Education at Pacific Adventist University in 1997.

Graham’s career and life climaxed on the morning of October 2, 1998, when an errant spark caused a petrol explosion on the Port Moresby campus. Graham, critically burnt, was airlifted to Brisbane and placed into a coma from which he never woke.

The Class of 1968 honours the well-lived life of Graham Barnett, remembering him as a man who never did things by half measure. Sleep on, Graham, until you hear the voice of the Life Giver.—Dr John Hammond

NEVA TAYLOR

Hurstville Adventist School in Sydney is Neva Taylor's current mission field. She's the principal, and she's passionate about the people whom and with whom she serves.

Generations of students can testify about how Neva has helped change their lives by introducing a living Christ. She seeks to understand her students, their family situations and fears, supporting them through difficulties. For example, three children at the school, who found themselves without a carer two years ago, initially stayed with Neva until the Department of Community Services found homes for them. However, rather than see the children separated, Neva has asked to continue providing care until the children's mother returns.

Neva's knowledgeable. She's a mentor, showing pre-service teachers from Avondale how to effectively integrate classroom units and then supporting the students with their programs in her own time and at her own cost. She's a leader, serving as principal and growing the school enrolment by 50 per cent over five years while encouraging her staff members to strive for excellence as citizens and teachers. Turnover has declined, significantly.

Neva's an internationalist, providing a homestay for international students, joining and helping fund mission trips to India and sponsoring students in other countries.

And Neva's not easily beaten, fighting and surviving cancer.

The Class of 1978 honours Neva Taylor as a woman of faith who puts people first.—Dr Jean Carter

TONY KNIGHT

A generation of young adults can attest: Pr Tony Knight is an advocate. "My years in youth ministry have indelibly etched in my mind the importance of speaking up for those who have no voice," he says.

Having graduated with a degree in theology, Tony began what is now three decades in local Seventh-day Adventist church and young adult ministry in the West and across Australia to not only use his power "to stand up for those with less power" but to then "empower them to take their place in this church. We are in the business of equipping others for service, leadership and ministry. We are not in the business of creating monuments to self."

This attitude shaped the way Tony and wife Jacqui raised their daughters. "It's been great to see Natasha and Ellesha grow, graduate and take their place in their chosen careers. It's tempting to say, 'Job done!', but as a parent, I suppose the job never ends." All members of the family studied at Avondale. "There is no substitute for the depth and solidity of the foundations Avondale provides."

Tony continues as Director of Resource Development for the church in Australia demonstrating his commitment to faithful creativity as co-author of The Hunter Chronicles, a narrative-based Bible exploration for juniors. He is also a playwright—you may have seen his productions at a Pathfinder camporee—an editor most recently of MyEdgeMag.com, a raconteur and a photographer with a penchant for landscapes and wildlife, particularly birds.

The Class of 1988 honours Pr Tony Knight, who has gone beyond better for those who deserve best.—Brenton Stacey

TAMARA PEACH

Born in Perth and raised in Albany, Western Australia, Tamara Peach completed high school at Carmel Adventist College in 1993 then spent two years working for a mortgage broking firm in Perth. The experience proved influential in her decision to enrol in the Bachelor of Business at Avondale. Her first job after graduating: Assistant Accountant for the Seventh-day Adventist Church in the South Pacific.

Tamara married alumnus Michael Peach—he graduated a year before she—in 2000. The couple have four children—Liam, Anneka, Morgan and Harry. The family uprooted in 2005 to work for the Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) in Thailand—Michael as Programs Director and Tamara as Finance Advisor to the Tsunami Rehabilitation Program, overseeing the distribution of more than USD7 million in aid from international donors.

The family returned to Australia—to Brisbane—in 2008 and, a few years later, Tamara decided to change careers, following her dream into full-time study for a Bachelor of Midwifery. She graduated in 2013 and started work as a midwife in 2014. Tamara received an "Excellence in Preceptoring" award from Griffith University this year. It recognises her role in mentoring students on placements at Redlands Hospital.

Tamara is a passionate mother, nurturing her children in their passion for high-level competitive swimming, and an avid runner, regularly participating in half marathons.

The Class of 2008 honours Tamara Peach for her commitment to delivering quality humanitarian and human services.—Lynnette Lounsbury

2008

CALVIN CHUANG

The promise of “the Avondale experience” influenced Calvin Chuang to study at college. He also wanted to make new friends and continue a family tradition. And Avondale offered courses in his two areas of passion—communication and international poverty and development studies.

After graduating, Calvin worked in communication—as Assistant Director—for the Seventh-day Adventist Church in Western Australia then as a self-employed video producer and graphic designer before moving to Loma Linda University (California, USA). He began as Media Producer and Graphic Designer for the School of Medicine’s Alumni Association and is now its Executive Director.

The relationships Calvin formed at college created opportunities that exceeded his goals and enabled him to help people—he’s filmed at hospitals and orphanages in Africa, Asia and South America. The values of compassion, loyalty and integrity guiding Calvin’s life also guide those of his friends. A few months after Calvin’s father died in 2009, he and others including James and Beryl Carson, James Crabtree and Jared Martin climbed to Everest Base Camp in Nepal. “It was the last thing Dad knew I was planning to do,” says Calvin. “So, to do it with Avondale friends was awesome.”

Calvin speaks highly of his classmates and of the college. “So many quality people who are now changing so many lives for the better. They helped me grow spiritually, socially and personally. You can’t put a price on that.”

The Class of 2008 honours Calvin Chuang for his dedication to helping people live fulfilling lives.—Adele Nash

LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT

GILBERT VALENTINE

Although a citizen of Avondale, Dr Gilbert Valentine is better understood as a citizen of the world. Born in New Zealand, educated there, in Australia and the United States, he has contributed with distinction to the mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church on four continents and in scores of countries. Serving first as a pastor and youth leader, then as an educator, administrator, theologian and historian, Gilbert personifies with passion and skill the Avondale motto, “A Greater Vision.”

The vision has been transmitted in coffee shop ministry by enthusiasts in Newcastle, to boarding students at Longburn Adventist College in New Zealand, to a worldwide collection of peers at Andrews University (Berrien Springs, Michigan, USA), to sophisticated city dwellers in Sydney, to ambitious but poor, even untouchable, Christian students in Pakistan, to diverse collections of staff members and students at Newbold (England), Avondale and the then Mission (Thailand) Colleges, and La Sierra University (Riverside, California, USA).

While expressing his vision for Adventist mission, Gilbert has become one of its premier historians. Author of four books, Gilbert reminds us of the power of the past to inform and transform the church into a contemporary expression of its founders’ vision.

Two remarkable women have offered blessings and support: Gail Cover Valentine, muse for the years of their marriage until her untimely death; and Kendra Haloviak Valentine, a lightbearer since their marriage in 2010. Sons Andrew and Lincoln bring honour to his legacy.

Think&DO

A JOURNEY THROUGH GIVING WITH AVONDALE

Power to think and do: it's a gift from the Creator. Seventh-day Adventist pioneer Ellen White makes the statement (Education, p. 17) to encourage us to explore and to engage. Giving to Avondale demonstrates your support for her philosophy.

Journey with us as we accept the challenge of learning and discovery. And as we use this knowledge to improve lives. Your gift will help our research centres give us a better understanding of spirituality and worship, Christian education and teaching and learning.

THANK YOU!

Your generous response in 2017 raised almost $100,000 for our research centres. They are using the money to invest in projects studying the biblical dimensions of worship and the implementation of science, technology, engineering and mathematics integration and exploring the practice of teaching and learning.
